Natural Factors

Wood and door joints naturally expand and contract. The following are not considered defects and do not affect the integrity of the door:

- Naturally occurring color, grain, and texture differences
- Color deviations, even within the same section of wood
- Differences between open- and closed-grain areas
- Visible mineral streaks
- Hairline cracks in the finish of the surface at the joints

Care & Cleaning

Your cabinetry is extremely resistant to stains and surface damage that can be caused by common household items. However, to further protect the original factory finish:

- Wipe up spills immediately using a clean cloth and mild soaps
- Dust your cabinets periodically using a soft, slightly dampened, lint-free cloth
- Read all cabinet care guidelines and cleaning product instructions carefully

Environmental Factors

Additional cabinetry may not match the original cabinets installed, and samples may no longer have a true color representation. This may be due to:

- Exposure to sunlight, smoke, and chemicals
- Change in door samples or displays due to age

1951 Cabinetry is not responsible for texture differences or color and wood grain variations in materials due to environmental factors.

The materials.

Cherry

Cherry is a closed-grain hardwood with varying textures, known for its warmth and distinctive curly figures and pin knots. Its natural color includes white, green, and gray, to a deep reddish-brown. As cherry wood ages over time, it begins to darken, bringing out all the unique qualities and grains.

SCAN ME

Maple

Maple is an extremely hard wood with a fine, even texture. It can be light to cream-colored, and its uniform straight grain may show wavy, bird's-eye, or burl graining. Maple is popular for its durability and luster.

SCAN ME

Painted

Painted finishes combine hardwoods and engineered materials for stability, consistency, and durability, with minimal grain visibility. Joint lines may appear due to the wood's natural expansion and contraction.

SCAN ME

Duraform

Duraform uses advanced manufacturing to bond foils and coatings to medium-density fiberboard, high-density fiberboard, and similar materials for exceptional stability, consistency, and durability.

SCAN ME

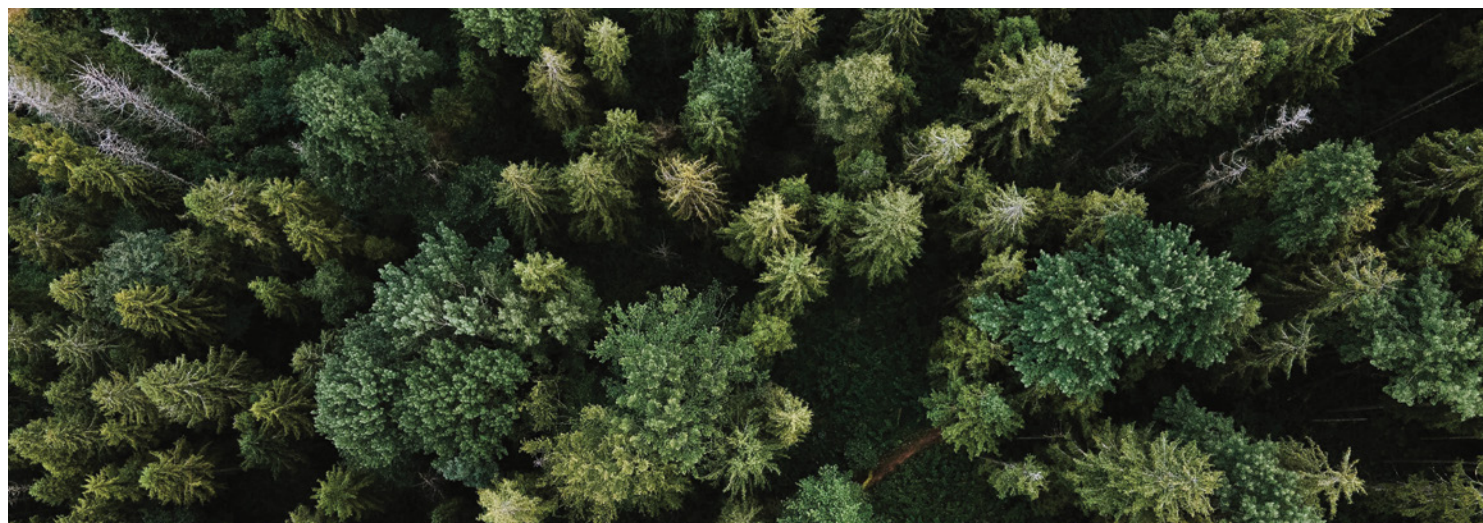

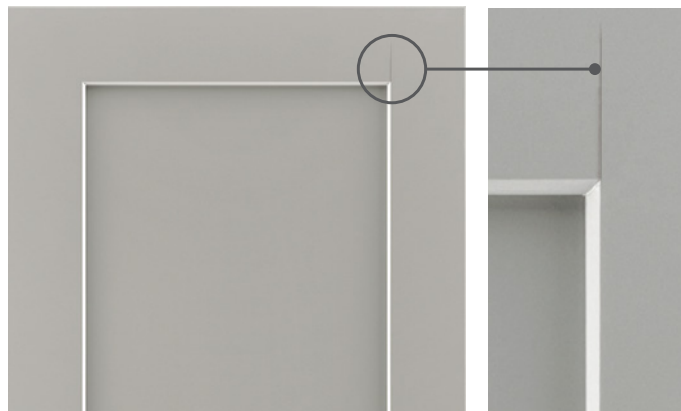

Hardwood

Hardwoods include dense-structured maple, oak, birch, cherry, hickory, poplar, and ash. Color ranges from light blond to dark reddish-brown. Variations of graining, color, and mineral streaks are natural.
